Dear Professor Vicini,

I write to introduce myself and to express my interest in teaching at Boston College should an adjunct position become available. I am a scholar of the New Testament and Christian Theology, and I recently completed a postdoctoral fellowship at Harvard Divinity School. I have five years of teaching experience in a liberal arts context, and I hold the Ph.D. from Durham University, where I studied under the Lightfoot Professor of Divinity Emeritus, John M.G. Barclay, FBA.

My teaching record includes a Faculty Teaching Award at a prior institution and high student ratings, with averages of 4.7/5 (professor rating) and 4.6/5 (class rating). My portfolio includes:

Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary

Exploring the New Testament (Spring 2024, Spring 2025)

The King's College, New York City

Introduction to New Testament (twenty times [two sections per semester from 2018-2023])

Principles of Biblical Interpretation (eight times [typically once per semester])

Systematic Theology (Fall '19, Fall '21)

Biblical-Theological Exegesis (Winter '19)

Considering my experience, I would be qualified to teach courses at B.C. such as THEO 1421 Inscribing the Word: The New Testament, THEO 1422: The Sacred Page: The Bible, and possibly THEO 1402 God, Self, and Society. For your consideration, I include my C.V. below.

Warmly,

Benjamin Grant White, Ph.D.
