“If adopted, (the rules) would provide investors with consistent, comparable, and decision-useful information for making investment decisions and would provide consistent and clear reporting obligations for issuers.”

SEC Chair Gary Gensler:
What rules?

- Climate-related disclosures. Rules proposed on March 21, 2022, mandate certain climate-related disclosures, regardless of materiality considerations, in annual reports and registration statements for all companies with SEC reporting obligations under Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (Exchange Act) Section 13(a) or 15(d) and for companies filing a Securities Act of 1933 (Securities Act) or Exchange Act registration statement. Requirements range from disclosing direct and indirect GHG emissions to sharing climate-related risks, targets or goals, and corporate governance practices to manage such risks. There is a phase-in period for compliance, with the compliance date depending on the company’s filing status.

- Disclosures by certain investment advisers and investment companies. Rule proposed, May 25, 2022, applies to registered investment companies, business development companies, registered investment advisers and certain unregistered advisers. It would require funds and advisers engaged in ESG investing to provide more specific disclosures related to their ESG strategies in fund prospectuses, annual reports and adviser brochures. The proposed rule also requires enhanced disclosures by funds using proxy voting or relying on an issuer to implement ESG strategies and an affirmation that compliance policies reasonably ensure that the fund aligns with the strategies outlined in its ESG disclosures.

- Changes to prevent misleading or deceptive fund names. To combat concerns about “greenwashing,” a rule proposed on May 25, 2022, requires an ESG fund to invest 80% of its assets in the ESG factor suggested by its name. Funds that consider ESG factors alongside, but not more than, non-ESG factors may not use ESG terms in their name.
